FoLL: Developing your skills in research-oriented teaching

Dear PhD-students,

The "Research-Oriented Teaching and Learning" (FoLL) program demonstrates that research is already possible during a bachelor's/undergraduate degree program. Would you like to supervise a small group of interested students in their project work, pursue your own research interests, and expand your skills in research-oriented teaching?

Then you can apply for FoLL in the winter semester 25/26 together with 4-8 bachelor's students (1/3 master's students possible) until September 23, 2025.

In addition to the project work in the subjects, the Section for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education offers exchange meetings and workshops for teachers and students.

More here or at susanne.wimmelmann@zvw.uni-goettingen.de.

Save the date:

- On November 6, 2025, starting at 6:00 p.m., the teams from the summer semester 2025 will present their results in the Adam von Trott Hall.
- On September 24–25, 2026, the nationwide conference for student research (StuFo) will take place at the University of Göttingen (more information to follow).
