Kommentar	Religion is both a controversial and a liberating force in American politics. On the one hand, the First Amendment to the Constitution guarantees freedom of religion and the separation of church and state; on the other hand, religion emerges at the center of political debates. As a matter of fact, the majority of Americans would refuse to vote for an atheist as President. In recent years, the national agenda included a number of questions that touch on deeply held religious beliefs, such as abortion, women's role in society, pornography, homosexuality, stem cell research, and euthanasia. Besides discussing these and other current controversies, including prayer, religious symbols in public property, and the limits of government aid to religious organizations, we shall look at the roots of Evangelicalism and historical contexts, foremost among them the Scopes Monkey Trial about the teaching of evolution in the 1920s, an issue that has emerged once again in the form of calls for teaching "intelligent design."

Kommentar	The American Rhetorical Tradition

We will attempt to find themes, motifs, and resonances within the tradition of public American rhetoric from colonial times to the present day. From John Winthrop and Jonathan Edwards to Martin Luther King, Jr., and Barack Obama, there have been reiterations of specific ideas regarding what America means and represents in the American mind. What are they? Special attention will be given to Abraham Lincoln and his particular importance within this tradition. We will emphasize the sermons and speeches themselves rather than secondary sources, so that we can attempt to grasp the cadences of American rhetoric within the context of both history and the American language as a whole.

Kommentar

The purpose of the course is to familiarize students with methods and techniques of film analysis. Taking a closer look at a small number of exemplary films of American film history, from the silent era to New Hollywood and the contemporary cinema, we will systematically explore various parameters such as storytelling and narrative style, mise-en-scène and setting, cinematography, editing, sound, color, lighting and special effects. At least one session will be dedicated to each of these aesthetic dimensions: we will closely examine specific scenes and discuss how they can be seen in relation to a film in its entirety. We will also consider how movies can be categorized according to genre—the Western, the Melodrama, the Road Movie or the Gangster Film—and explore how generic parameters contribute to the overall form of a film.

Learning how to read films in select case studies and with regard to specific aesthetic categories will acquaint students with the expressive possibilities of the medium and will allow them to acquire the competency to critically analyze a film and to interpret its story, theme and politics with regard to various formal aspects. Students are required to write a critical film analysis as a final term paper.

A list of the films to be analyzed closely and a textbook with which we will work in the seminar will be announced in due time.

Please note:Students in B.EP.21 need to combine this course with the lecture "Introducing Critical Theory".

The course will explore the representation and figuration of New York City and urban life in American visual culture. The geographical, socioeconomic and cultural transformations that characterized the development of the American metropolis since the mid-nineteenth century have been a matter of central concern to writers, reformers, photographers, painters and other visual artists. While some works accentuate the rich experience and sensual appeal of the city, its crowds and amusements as well the aspirations of its inhabitants, others emphasize the 'perils of the city' - the poverty, prostitution and dire living conditions of urban immigrant quarters. Urban neighborhoods, buildings or monuments also often figure as allegorical spaces, symbolizing American ideals and dreams or representing particular ethnic affiliations. We will consider the aesthetic, cultural and ethnographic dimensions of the urban scenery in paintings, prints and photography: the painters of the Ash Can School, Georgia O'Keeffe or Edward Hopper; the social documentary work and images of street life by Jacob Riis, Helen Levitt, Roy DeCarava or Weegee; the presentation of architecture, commercial spaces and vertical New York in Alfred Stieglitz, Andreas Feininger or Berenice Abbott; as well as filmic—both fictional and documentary—depictions of urban life.

Drawing on critical theory of photography, painting and social documentary, we will move from images of the nineteenth-century city of immigrants to the cosmopolis of the twentieth century: the boomtown of the Roaring Twenties, Harlem and the African-American and Hispanic New York after 1960. Finally, we will consider the visual memory and reconfiguration of Manhattan in the aftermath of 9/11.

This class will focus on historical documents describing the European exploration of the Americas as well as these documents' reflection in American literature and film. We will analyze texts by or about Christopher Columbus, Hernando de Soto, Sir Walter Raleigh, Captain John Smith, and other early explorers. Themes and issues include relations with Native Americans, the search for gold, power struggles among the European colonizers, early forms of the slave trade, and the "lost colony" of Roanoke.

A course reader will be made available at the copy shop "Klartext."

Kommentar	As humans, we have remarkable linguistic abilities: we are able to understand an unlimited number of sentences, including sentences that we haven't heard before. The knowledge that allows us to accomplish this incredible feat is largely unconscious. In this class, we will aim to uncover this knowledge by formulating and testing hypotheses about the interpretation of sentences and their parts. At different points in the class, we may make connections with related fields, like language acquisition. This class will suit you if you are interested in linguistic meaning, are keen on analytical thinking and enjoy theory-building. Regular class participation and class homework are required.

Kommentar Das Seminar bietet einen Abriss der englischen Sprachgeschichte von den Anfängen bis zur Gegenwart auf der Grundlage ausgewählter alt- und mittelenglischer Texte. Behandelt werden wichtige Entwicklungen in Phonologie, Morphologie, Syntax und Wortschatz, etwa der Great Vowel Shift, der Übergang von einer synthetischen zu einer analytischen Sprachstruktur durch Flexionsverfall, die Entwicklung des Tempussystems und die Entwicklung vom primär germanischen Wortschatz des Altenglischen zum germanisch-romantischen Mischwortschatz des heutigen Englisch.

Kommentar This lecture provides a survey of the earliest stages of English language history. It covers both the prehistory of English and the entire Old English period as well the transitional phase to Middle English during the twelfth century. Developments in various linguistic categories, such as orthography, phonology, morphology, syntax and vocabulary, are presented and put in their cultural context. No previous knowledge is necessary. For more information, see <http://wwwuser.gwdg.de/~otraxel/>.

Kommentar The Early Modern Period (c. 1500 to 1700) has often been styled 'the most decisive' one in the development of standard Modern English (Görlach: 1991). Points of interest in this class will be the attitudes of speakers of Early Modern English towards their mother-tongue, the vocabulary and its enrichment and refinement, the beginnings of modern lexicography, changes of meaning between then and now, Early Modern English pronunciation and the problem of orthography, grammar, syntax and - if time allows - regional and social variation. Topics will be discussed on the basis of contemporary texts.

El sainete y la zarzuela son los favoritos del público teatral a finales del siglo XIX y a principios del XX - en un momento en que la vitalidad de la escena española es enorme.

Los estudios literarios, sin embargo, se han ocupado bastante poco de la zarzuela, género que combina partes habladas y otras cantadas (ya sea en su vertiente "grande" - en varios actos-, ya sea "chica"), y tampoco mucho de los sainetes, piezas cómicas breves de ambientación popular, con su música o sin ella.

Nos acercaremos a estas formas dramáticas, prestando especial atención a la relación de música y texto, a los problemas ideológicos que acarrean, a su intertextualidad (parodias), a sus condiciones de producción y recepción en el momento (el teatro por horas), a su situación actual, y a la posibilidad de usar estas obras en la enseñanza del español.

Los textos con los que trabajaremos a principio del semestre estarán disponibles a partir del 1 de octubre en el "Semesterapparat" (Kopiervorlagen); el material musical se distribuirá en las primeras clases.

Inscripción a través de StudIP entre el 15 de septiembre y el 12 de octubre.

A caballo entre los siglos XVIII y XIX, la prensa comenzó a alcanzar un poder político y social determinante que, en el marco de la teoría de los tres poderes de Montesquieu, vendría a constituirse en un cuarto poder que daría voz a la opinión pública. La multiplicación y mayor penetración social y mundial de los medios de comunicación de masas propia del siglo XX y comienzos del XXI les ha otorgado a estos un gran poder de control político, al tiempo que de intervención en la res publica. La crítica a dicho poder ha permitido ver con mayor claridad que los medios de comunicación de masas no se limitan a reflejar la supuesta opinión pública, sino que intenten conformarla según sus intereses ideológicos. En ese sentido, la representación mediática de una inalcanzable realidad pasaría a tener un incalculable peso informativo y de convicción, pues lograría simular semánticamente una representación de la realidad. En el marco de esta reflexión (McLuhan, Enzensberger, Baudrillard), este curso estudia y discute la prensa política española contemporánea, especialmente los diarios ABC, El País y La Vanguardia, con la finalidad de comprender críticamente sus concepciones ideológicas y sus proyectos de país y para el país. Así, al tiempo que se observará críticamente las diferentes presentaciones de las noticias acaecidas durante el propio semestre en el que se va a desarrollar este curso, se examinarán las líneas editoriales de estos diarios -y las opiniones de sus columnistas de referencia- para comprender cabalmente la interpretación que proponen del acontecer político, social y cultural de la España más actual. Se solicita a los estudiantes interesados que se inscriban en el Stud.IP.

Kommentar In the final paragraphs of F. Scott Fitzgerald's The Great Gatsby (1925), the narrator Nick Carraway ponders the dreams and feelings of the first Europeans who laid eyes on North America: "For a transitory enchanted moment man must have held his breath in the presence of this continent, compelled into an aesthetic contemplation he neither understood nor desired, face to face for the last time in history with something commensurate to his capacity for wonder." In this lecture course, we will learn about what may well be the most wondrous period in American cultural history. We will investigate the hopes and prejudices of European cultures reproducing and transcending themselves in foreign places; we will witness various forms of intercultural dialogue, conflict, and intermixture; we will shift perspective from a Eurocentric narrative of discovery to a (hopefully not romantic) narrative of invasion, thereby providing an introduction to postcolonial theory as well. Ultimately, we will ask what it means to say that America has been a multiethnic, multiregional, and multicultural place from the very beginning—a paradoxical culture that is pluralistic and unpredictable, yet strangely consistent and distinctive.

Our readings will include early European New World writings (Bacon, Shakespeare, Las Casas, De Vaca), the first accounts of colonization and settlement (John Smith, Thomas Harriot, William Bradford, Thomas Morton), Puritan literatures both orthodox and heterodox (John Winthrop, Anne Hutchinson, Edward Taylor, Anne Bradstreet), Indian captivity narratives and missionary tracts (Mary Rowlandson, John Eliot), various texts attesting to profound mental and intellectual shifts in the late seventeenth century and during the Great Awakening (Cotton Mather, Jonathan Edwards, Charles Chauncy), and the first true classic of American literature: Benjamin Franklin's The Autobiography. Most of these texts will be studied in excerpts. For a final selection, see syllabus.

This lecture course is part of a six-semester lecture series called "A Cultural History of American Literature," spanning from the sixteenth to the twenty-first century. "Exploration and Settlement, Invasion and Interculturality" is the first part of the series. It is possible to begin attending the lecture series at any point in the cycle.

Texts: Most texts are collected in Nina Baym et al., eds. The Norton Anthology of American Literature (7th edition, vol. A). Additional texts will be made available in a reader at the copy shop "Klartext".

Please note: If you cannot attend this lecture course because of a scheduling conflict with other mandatory courses, please see us in advance and we will organize screenings of the lecture course for you, and provide you with material for independent study. Please understand that we can provide this service only if you contact us before the first week of classes!

However, each reading course will cover the same material, and this material will be equally novel to each group of students. Thus, if there is a scheduling conflict with other courses, you can attend any of the reading courses, no matter how far advanced you are in your studies.

The course starts in the first week of the semester.

		Di 12:00 - 14:00 Klausur am: 08.02.2011

Kommentar The first part of the lecture series introduces relevant theoretical approaches, critical thinkers and schools in the field of literary and cultural studies: the Frankfurt School, Post-structuralism, Postmodernism, Psychoanalytic Theory, Material Culture and Technology Studies, (Post-) Marxist Criticism, New Historicism, Postcolonial Theory and Diaspora Studies, Reader-Response Criticism, Gender and Queer Studies, Theories of Race and Ethnicity, and Systems Theory.

Theorists include but are not restricted to Theodor Adorno, Walter Benjamin, Homi Bhabha, Pierre Bourdieu, Judith Butler, Jacques Derrida, Sigmund Freud, Michel Foucault, Stuart Hall, Linda Hutcheon, Wolfgang Iser, Frederic Jameson, Jacques Lacan, Bruno Latour, Niklas Luhmann, Julia Kristeva, and Raymond Williams. Single lectures will focus on either a particular theoretical approach or school or a major theorist.

The second part of the lecture series, "Approaches and Methods in Media Studies," to be offered in the summer term 2011, will focus on media theory, visual culture and methods of media and film analysis. The two-semester lecture series aims at introducing students to major approaches, traditions and key figures as well as critical methods in the field of literary, cultural and media theory.

A reader containing key texts will be provided at the beginning of the semester.
